GOVERNOR'S COUNCIL IN UNANIMOUS DECISION

MISSING GUYTER SUICIDE?

Friends and relatives of James R. Lambert, of No. 2 Norfolk street, Cambridge, believe that he has killed himself in order to attract attention to some short stories that he wrote and was unable to sell. Lambert was a plain man, but had literary aspirations. He worked at the photo business during the day and at night wrote fiction. His failure as an author drove him to his trade end—if he is dead. In a letter which Lambert wrote to his brother John he wrote that five short stories he sold at auction on Friday and that the proceeds he gave to his mother. This, Lambert says, was the last device he could conceive of to make money by writing. Mrs. Lambert is distressed by the tragedy of her son and has killed himself, and she believes he has made way with himself. The police are investigating the case. Some of the less credulous policemen see in the letter writing a clever ruse of a fiction writer to get his product. But the young man's mother and brother believe that he has killed himself, as he said he would. No trace of the missing young man has been found later than yesterday.

REVERE HAS FIRST NEW YEAR'S BABY

Louis Everett Frothingham, Jr., of Revere, born early today, and his grand 11-year-old aunt, Mabel Frothingham.

John Lambert, when seen at his home today, said: "I shall carry out the instructions of my brother and action of his stories. This will be done at the office of Alderman Thomas Gurnea on Massachusetts avenue, Cambridgeport, at 10 a. m. Friday. I have already received some offers for the stories, but have turned them all down, so that my brother's instructions may be carried out to the letter. "On Monday night my brother and I attended a theatre together and after that we went for a walk. He was unusually quiet that night. I recall, saying very little. I do not know whether he is dead or not, but fear the worst. Mother to be broken hearted. She is unable to see anyone."

It was said that Lambert had been in correspondence with Lew Dinkelspiel, Bert Williams, Norm Rogers and Jack Norworth about his writings, but that nothing he had written was accepted by any of them. Here is another letter sent to the brother:

The "Suicide" Letter.
Cambridge, December 21, 1912.
Dear John—I have become so utterly dependent at the way we have been lately existing for the last few years that I can stand it no longer, and I have decided to end it all. In the hope of being able to better our condition, I have striven for years to try and get the magazines to publish our stories.

I have always felt that if I was given the chance, I possessed the knack of getting a story together that would make acceptable reading. But my efforts have been all in vain, and I have decided that the struggle is no longer for me to continue any longer, as that I had better stop. I believe that I will be doing more good and help more people if I have, and I am depending on you to see that my story is not lost. I am possible being for what may seem to you the severity of my letter.

I have written a full account of what I am doing to the potential readers, and I am sending you the enclosed. I am sure that you will find it interesting. I am sure that you will find it interesting. I am sure that you will find it interesting.

G. O. P. PLANS CONFERENCE ON SENATORSHIP

As soon as Speaker Grafton D. Cushing was re-elected for Speaker of the House of Representatives today at the State house he snapped the Republican whip and came out strongly for a conference of the Republicans on the question of the United States senatorship. This caused much surprise among the Republicans. Speaker Cushing said it was imperative that the Republicans get together on this matter at once. After having visited the Speaker had to say the caucus voted unanimously to hold a conference on the senatorship Monday at 2 p. m. In an article on the part of the Republican members of the House, "Senatorship," a P. Gardner, who is handling the civil service for Senator William H. Brewster, this independent Republican said that the conference would be held by the members. They agreed that it was an attempt on the part of the leaders of the party to elect a stand-pat Republican Senator.

Cushing's Attitude.
Speaker Cushing at the caucus said: "It is very important that the Republican members should get together on the question of the United States senatorship. The people are interested. The matter should be treated in the most open manner. The people have a right to feel that the members of the party, some of whom they elected, are giving careful attention to this important question."

The Republican members-elect should get into a conference at the earliest possible moment, not for a caucus, nothing binding, simply to get an exchange of opinions. The earliest possible day would be Thursday, Friday or Monday afternoon. The most agreeable would be Monday afternoon. The Republican members of the Senate will meet the members of the House in the senatorship conference on Monday.

Thorton K. Ware's Will Gives $10,000 to Faithful Nurse

Miss Mary Ella Harwell, the nurse who attended the late Thorton K. Ware of No. 152 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, secretary of the Cambridge Dramatic Club, receives a $10,000 bequest under Mr. Ware's will, which was filed in Worcester (North) Probate Court at Fitchburg today. The bulk of the estate goes to the testator's brother, Charles E. Ware, a Fitchburg attorney. Mr. Ware was greatly attached to Miss Harwell because of her kindness in his dying days.

YOUNG WOMAN FOUND SLAIN IN A MAIDEN CEMETERY

A beautiful young woman, whose identity has not been disclosed, lately dressed and wearing two rings, one of which was a diamond, was found murdered today on the marshes in the heart of Holy Cross cemetery, Malden. The woman's throat had been crushed and her head crushed. It was apparent from the condition of the woman's clothing and the surroundings that she had made a terrible fight against her assailant. The woman was apparently between thirty and thirty-two years of age.

MAN DANGEROUSLY SHOT IN BOSTON SALOON

William McPherson, 129 West Concord street, South End, was shot and dangerously wounded in a saloon at West Concord and Washington streets this afternoon. "Kid Carter," a convict of the woman's clothing, and James B. Jennings, were arrested on the charge of shooting McPherson.

'13's Lucky," Says Wilson

PHILADELPHIA, N. J., Jan. 1.—"Another lucky year has started—the year 1913," was the observation made today by Woodrow Wilson, whose life so far has proved a continuous refutation of the old superstition regarding the ill fortune of "13." For President-elect Wilson 13 has proved a signal of good luck, and in discussing this question today he said:

How the number "13" has figured in my life—always in connection with some good fortune. You know the number "13" has proved a signal of good luck.

You know the electoral college which is to vote officially electing me to the presidency is to meet January 13, 1913. Perhaps you have noticed that if the numerals making up the year 1913, in which I was elected president, are added up, the total is 13. It is also a fact that mine is the thirty-first term, and if these numbers were placed backward the result is 13.

The President-elect watched the old year out and the new one in, retiring at 12 o'clock after 12 hours of further in connection with the retiring of the old year and the coming of the new year. Further in connection with the retiring of the old year and the coming of the new year. Further in connection with the retiring of the old year and the coming of the new year.

BANISH FRILLS AS SULZER TAKES OFFICE AS 42D GOVERNOR

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—In the presence of 2,000 persons, William Sulzer was inaugurated today as the forty-second Governor of New York in the State capital at noon. The ceremony was marked by the absence of military display. The new state governor said he wanted everything to be as democratic as possible, and to carry out the ideas in this respect he decided that the procession, headed by himself and the retiring Governor, from the executive mansion to the capital, should be on foot, thus breaking all precedents.

GIRL TELLS IN COURT LOVE FOR MAN SHE SHOT

GARDINER, Jan. 1.—The story of her information for David Jaskininen, whom she shot November 17 last, was told today on the witness stand by Miss Hilma Lumme when she was before the District Court on an assault charge.

Miss Lumme told how she turned the revolver upon herself, inflicting two bullet wounds in her chest. She had just been released from the Henry Heywood Memorial Hospital. She was arrested as she left the hospital grounds.

In his complaint to the court, Jaskininen says the alleged assault occurred in front

MOTOR TRUCK DERAILS CAR; 2 BADLY HURT

Two men were badly hurt, one of them a passenger, and thirty other passengers received a scare when a heavy motor truck and an Isuzu brand house street-car collided on Cambridge street today on the wing of perfect weather.

When President Taft went to breakfast he planned out of the White House window to see half a hundred persons already lining the Pennsylvania avenue entrance to the legislative mansion waiting for his last reception to the public.

The first day of the New Year is probably the busiest of the entire twelve months for the chief executive. President Taft's program for today comprised the following reception:

11 o'clock—The members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps.

11:30 o'clock—The chief justice of the United States and the associate justices of the Supreme Court; the judges of the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court of the district of Columbia; former members of the cabinet, ambassadors and ministers of the United States.

12:30 o'clock—Senators, representatives and delegates in Congress.

1:45 o'clock—All military officials now in Washington or its surrounding posts.

2:30 o'clock—Members of the various government departments and the United States army and navy.

3:30 o'clock—Reception of citizens.

JOHN I. HALL DEAD.

MAISON, Ga., Jan. 1.—John I. Hall, aged seventy-two, assistant attorney general under President Cleveland, a former Federal judge and an ex-member of the Georgia Legislature, died today.

Public Notice

On March 1st, Mr. Georges, Sr., retires from the Georges business, which he founded away back in 1879—and I take over complete ownership.

While I have been for years the dynamo of energy and originality back of the brilliantly successful Georges stores in five cities, yet I never fully realized the magnificent possibilities of spreading the Georges policy and ideas until a few weeks ago, when I assumed entire management of the business to effect a compulsory Reorganization. I can now see in the future a Georges store in every principal city, and it makes me intensely anxious that this Reorganization shall raise for me the necessary cash to make my settlement with the retiring Senior Member. My present merciless sacrificing of the great stocks throughout my five stores is evidence of my eagerness to get control, and to grow, unhampered by the bonds of conservatism.

N. H. DEMOCRATS AND HOOSIERS WIN SKIRMISH

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 1.—The first skirmish in the New Legislature, which is to elect a Governor and other candidates, was won by the Democrats here today with the aid of the Progressives. This was shown by the political forecasters to indicate that Samuel D. Parker, Democrat, will be the next Governor of New Hampshire.

The Democratic victory came on the third test in the House on the question of whether a man should be allowed to write his name on the back of the ballot when voting for Speaker. The vote resulted as follows: Yeas, 204; nays, 197.

The House voted with the Democrats, following their vote in the Progressive caucus in support of Parker and the Democratic candidate.

In the Senate today a temperate compromise was effected by making John Benson of Exeter temporary president. The Republicans predicted there would be a deadlock in the vote for Speaker.

BOSTON WOMEN ALIVE, SAYS MRS. PHILLIPS

LEADING A BOLD MOVE.

Mrs. Harry Phillips, who says, "I am no brick-throated Suffragist," and seems showing some of her activities in England.

English Suffragist Approves Idea of Women Smoking at Home, Not in Public.

Favoring meetings where men and women may enter into an interchange of thought on questions of public moment.

Mrs. Harry Phillips, a leading English suffragist, who is now in Boston, says this country is far behind England in that respect.

She told Boston women "very much alive."

Mrs. Phillips agreed with Mrs. Jack Fairchild that smoking by women is a matter of taste. She also holds similar views as the Boston women on drinking, and on extravagance.

"If a woman smokes at home with her husband, it is nobody's business," she declared.

Mrs. Phillips is touring the principal cities in the United States with her husband, giving lectures on suffrage and other questions. Her talk, though, has been to do with the suffragist movement.

The way she is to a "brick-throated suffragist."

Mrs. Phillips is well known in all the cities and towns in England, having lectured in those places under the auspices of the National Council League, Social and Political Education League, Women's Industrial Club, National Union of Women Workers of the U. S., U. S. Charity Organization Society, and other organizations.

Commenting on the suffragist movement in this country and England, Mrs. Phillips said:

"The evolution of women demands that she be allowed to express herself through the avenue of politics, and the individual, and working out from the individual, must come all permanent and real improvement of society."

Not a Brick Throated.

I am opposed to the militant side of the suffragist movement. A fine principle must always be carried out ethically. Violence is not ethical. I am not a brick-throated suffragist.

I do not so much object to women voting for women as I am in getting women to meet on an equal plane with men.

Women are very much alive in Boston.

GRAND OPERA SINGERS MAKE 1913 DEBUTS

Rehearsal grand opera singers have joined the crowd, and have shown off on various things for 1913. Today they are busy trying to live up to these conditions. Some of them are:

TANYA WALKOW

I promise not to play Samson in "Russia" with Mow Garden, at least not in Boston.

JESKA SWARTZ

Never again will I forget to go to a season platform. For when I last saw Mow Garden and I happened to be looking for a train to St. Paul last fall, some person went around to telephone to the country that we were to meet and honey-bug.

MRS. TETRAZINI

I've promised my husband that I will not buy any jewelry during the next year—not even as much as I like. I am going to get another diamond before I have one, one of those what you call them—yes, "bull's head." I've spent nearly $20,000 in jewelry since the last few years.

ANASTASIO ROSA

I will cut down my business list from Boston.

MADAME MARIA GAY

I've made up my mind that I never shall be cross or vexed at the things the critics write about me next year. I've that a good resolution to make.

DIRECTOR HENRY MULLER

Grand opera is the thing will be bigger and better in 1913 than in the past. It is our aim and we shall do our best.

MINERS ENTOMBED BY FLOOD SIGNAL THEY ARE ALIVE

TAUNTON, Pa., Jan. 1.—Some, and perhaps all, of the seven miners entombed yesterday by a flood in the mine of the East Lehigh Coal Company are still alive. Today, workers at the mine removing rock and debris brought down the miners, and at 4 o'clock a few days after the accident, the miners were rescued. The miners, who were entombed in the mine, were rescued from the mine.

EXPLOSION BURNS MAN, STARTS FIRE

The explosion of a chemical barrel in Dr. Robert L. Emerson's laboratory at No. 719 Beacon street burned Arthur Whitson, his assistant, wounding the glassware and starting a fire which caused a $700 loss.

EVERYBODY WHO USED GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY OBTAINED FINE RESULTS

At the time I commenced using your Swamp Root I was so bad that I had to give up work. The pains in my back would be like some sharp instrument piercing my kidneys every time I walked. I got out of a chair without help. I finally resolved to give your Swamp Root a trial and the results were so fine that I have recommended it to others and it seems to produce the same beneficial results with everybody who uses it. I am very thankful to you for your great remedy, Swamp Root, as I know that it will do all you claim.

SPEAKING OF HATS LAMP THESE OF 1913

(PARIS, Dec. 31.—) Checked or parti-colored hats for men are the latest innovation in Boulevard fashion.—NEWS ITEM.)

By HANK.

Why not the "Water Wagon Hat," of aqua pure cheer, Appropriate, and up-to-date, to greet the brand New Year?

Or if you scorn to cast a vote, just remove the stopper, And have a drink of—er—some ink, from out the "Growler Topper."

And then we have the "Clock Chapaneau," a most noteworthy hunch, The cuckoo cries, and you surmise 'tis time you had your lunch.

But last of all, "The Headlight Hat," a boon 'twixt you and me, As bright as day 'twill make the way, and guide a wobbly knee.

 when he first popped up he was so orful that I ordered the door-tender of my gym to toss him downstairs.
 If he didn't take the hint to sneak.
 "It didn't make any difference how many times the doorkeeper begged Luther to fade, the big fellow kept hanging around and wore us out, so that we had to let him in and dig up a manager for him."
 "You know a fighter, no matter how bad he is, requires a manager. They are as necessary as flies in Summer.
 "Well, anyhow, Luther kept up that per-

Within the last decade or so governmental regulation of great enterprises has been one of this country's most vital public questions, if not the most vital one. The party which has governed was devoted to special interests which the great mass of the American people regard as minimal to their own interests, but the other one will enter office pledged to change all this. It is bound by good faith to tariff revision and to such other alterations that the national policy will favor no one at the expense of others.

What plans have been made to develop the plant as a source of power? It has been sufficient to build a dam and to build the power house. These various and different uses of the power have cost a great deal of living labor and the pocketbooks of the people. Then war has been superadded with the production of electricity at a cost of $100 per kilowatt hour, and other products.

H. P. S. extravagance has been partly checked. Moreover, reckless speculation has been curbed and discouraged. Swindling promoters have been arrested all over the country, and many millions of dollars thus saved to poor people.

There is an outlook which creates so much doubt as to what will be done about the tariff, about the currency system and many other matters of great importance to manufacturing, banking, commercial and laboring interests that there is good reason for men who have great wealth, are far-seeing and who are identified with the industries and banks of the country to deem it wise to proceed slowly until they know how far the revolution is to go and how drastic the changes will be.

It is as fear that crops would fail that provides bears with ammunition last Summer. Thereafter the election and the realization that the currency would have to face all that may be implied by the passing of a very old regime and the advent of a new one. A great European war began unexpectedly and restricted business in Europe, besides causing the hoarding or retention of gold at its capitals. This war there, seemed to precipitate a conflict which would involve evergreat Power on the other side of the Atlantic, and perhaps change the political map of the Eastern Hemisphere. All that went on across the sea affected this country, for the world has steadily contracted as to time and distance since the hour when George Washington solemnly advised his countrymen to beware of engaging foreign alliances. Now trade follows the flag, and the international business of the United States is of almost as much im-

The world's business amounted to $3,000,000,000 in 1912. This is a record. It is $1,000,000,000 larger than the trade of 1911 and double that of 1890, the year when universal statistics were first calculated.

The wheat production on farms of 1912 is estimated by 2,900,000 bushels. The wheat production of farms during the last sixteen years reached the grand total of more than 105,000,000,000, and has covered the needs of the farmers of the present national value.

A field half as large again as Italy, or nearly as large as either France or Germany, is the area of this country's corn-land. The corn crop of 1912 was 1,200,000,000 bushels, and the corn crop produced in this country. In value, too, the corn crop of 1912 is the highest. This crop was worth to the farmer 20 per cent. more than the average of the previous five Doubts of Early Months. Prior to June, or roundly, during the first six months of the year, the commercial pulse was somewhat under normal. Misgivings to the year's outcome were general. It was a presidential year—always a trade drawback and the highest predictions of what the soil would yield were relatively limited. Financiers were more in line, expecting, on the whole, a more moderate harvest—factors were very low. Tradegmen generally in view of quadrennial politics looked for small returns.

Yet Wall Street, in spite of high money rates and the high probability of a recession, has the admiration of the administration in Washington, was finally influenced by the boom in business, and the high money values seem to have moved forward.

They were hardly well understood when an explosion occurred in Europe. The British, French and Turkey drew their swords. Europe barely escaped monetary disaster. The world was being torn apart for securities, but the brain trust of the world was not in a position to do anything but watch the situation. Every European centre wanted money to hoard. In the near future, the world was to witness the Balkan conflict, Austria and Russia, the hoarding was private property. The world was not in a position to do anything but watch the extent that Austria was finally obliged to borrow heavily in order to finance its war.

It was in this country, call it the United States, that the money rate rose to 20 per cent and the money market was in a position to do anything but watch the extent that Austria was finally obliged to borrow heavily in order to finance its war.

Every in the year 1914, the money rate rose to 20 per cent and the money market was in a position to do anything but watch the extent that Austria was finally obliged to borrow heavily in order to finance its war.

A Big Important Baby Is This New Year Old Father Time Brings

The New Baby Is Born Today. With the New Year Comes the New Opportunity.

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal Company

A New Year has come in today, YOUR NEW YEAR. Every
New Year that is born is like a new born baby. Its chances, its possibilities, are all before it.

Old Father Time brings these babies along one at a time. And they run their 365 days, and then they vanish.

The new baby that Time brings us is the property of us all. It is YOUR baby, and your neighbor's, and everybody else's.

The father is responsible for the child. You are responsible for this baby year which is your property and belongs to you. What are you going to DO with it?

How did you end the year that has just expired?

That ending will tell largely the story of the year just born.

You will find it profitable to sit down and think what a New Year means—only about thirty active working years in the average human life.

The man who thinks about it seriously, plans about it earnestly, will have most reason to be grateful for 365 days in 1913.

May they be good days for our readers, days of useful work, of AMBITION FULFILLED.

"Electricity Increases the Weight of Man," Says a Frenchman

It May Well Do So, as the Atoms That Constitute Man's Body Are Made Up of "Electrons." We Are Nothing but Electricity, Plus Thought.

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal Company

A French scientist of Bordeaux has announced that he can increase the weight of a human being by applications of electricity. This interests a few who understand what little is known about matter and force. It amuses many who jocosely suggest electric volts instead of expensive breakfasts.

The use of electricity, in the hands of scientists, not of charlatans or reckless makers of experiments, will play a more and more important part in the treating of disease and many physical complications with which men are afflicted.

Man is in reality an electric machine, made up of electric particles. There are a certain number of so-called "elements" in the universe. These elements number fewer than a hundred—and a majority of them can be found in the human body. They can also be found, as the spectroscope shows us, in the distant stars. These different elements are made up of molecules, and the molecules in their turn are made up of atoms.

Men used to believe that the atom was the smallest thing. The name comes from the Greek word "temno," to cut. The derivative "at" is put before it and makes "atom" mean "uncuttable." The scientists thought the atom so small that it could not be cut. And they thought they had thus settled the construction of matter.

Now, however, we know that each atom is divided into a number of "electrons." The atom of hydrogen has a certain number of dozens of electrons, and the atoms in the various other elements each have their electron make-up.

The electron is so called because it is a manifestation of electricity. Thus we see that man with his hair, his teeth, his bones, his muscles, his nerves, is simply a collection of electrons, combined in the units and molecules of various elements.

There is no reason why a machine like the human body, made up of electrons and guided by "consciousness" or "spirit" or "soul," should not be fed largely and successfully upon electricity.

As a matter of fact, the body does its work very much like an electric machine.

When your brain sends an order through one of the nerves, and sets a muscle in operation, there is an electrical explosion at the end of the nerve—and then the muscle works.

We do the work of our bodies, the hard work, NOT with the food that we eat—that is chiefly used in making new tissues, and repairing what we wear out. Our real work is done with the air taken into the lungs. The iron in the red corpuscles carries the electric force all through the body, in the blood vessels, feeding the thousands of millions of cells, every one of which eats and drinks and breathes separately, just as the individual man does.

You can live forty days without food, seven days without water—THREE MINUTES WITHOUT AIR. The real force comes from the air, with its oxygen and its electric force, keeping you alive and at work.

Remember that, when you foolishly shut your windows tight at night.

As men become civilized they will rely less on brutal power and more on thought, they will live less on material food and depend more on higher and subtler forces.

Eventually, in a few millions of years at the most, man will probably be an electric body; the solids and the liquids that he absorbs will be very few compared with these days. He will not feed upon the flesh of dead animals, but will find food in a higher and nobler source.

Just at present, while we all live on dead meat, murdering and eating the lower animals to keep ourselves going, we are inclined to laugh at the very simple proposition that electricity ought to be a good food for an electric being.

Dorothy Dix Says
Wives Cannot Change Their Husbands' Habits, but They Should Not Be Disconsolate
Over Neglect

By Dorothy Dix

IN the course of a year I get thousands of letters from unhappy wives complaining that their husbands neglect them, or that their husbands will never take them to any place of amusement, that their husbands are niggardly and stingy to them.

These women are all miserable, and they all want to know what they can do to ameliorate their hard lot in life.

Of course, what they really desire is some magical formula that will change a neglectful husband into an attentive one, an indifferent husband into a lover and a tightwad into a generous husband. Unfortunately the day of miracle is past, and a woman can no more alter a man over to her taste than she could the flock of Gibraltar.

Only in Novels Does a Wife's Patience Reform Husband

In novels a husband sometimes is fed by his wife's gentleness and angelic patience to turn over a new leaf, and from having been a concatenation of cussedness become a paragon of domestic virtues, but if any such metamorphosis ever took place in real life, I can only say that I have never been privileged to behold it. As a general working proposition a wife may take it that what her husband is he is going to be to the end of the chapter, only more so as the years go by. If he is kind, and tender, and considerate he will be tenderer, and kinder, and more considerate as they go down the hill together, because big souls grow with age. If a man is mean, and selfish, and stingy, and tyrannical, he will grow meaner, and more selfish, and stingier, and more tyrannical as he grows old because little souls narrow, and warp, and grow bitter with age.

If a man neglects his wife he does so because he is tired of her and she bores him. If he doesn't want to take her out with him to any place of amusement it is because he has a better time without her. If he is peevish with her it is because he wants to save his money for himself. They are blunt and brutal facts, but they are facts. Furthermore, there is not one blessed thing that a woman can do to alter them. The only remedy for the situation is to face it fairly and squarely, and for women to go to work to make over their own lives which can be done, instead of trying to make over their husbands, which cannot be done.

For instance, why should a woman rend the hair with her walls because her husband never wants to take her out with him? Why doesn't she just accept the truth that he doesn't enjoy her society, and get up and hunt up some amusement on her own account?

The time has gone by when a woman has to approach any place of popular amusement hooked on to a masculine arm. Nor do women in this day of grace lack for diversions. With every theatre having two matinees a week; with moving picture shows on every corner, with the innumerable women's clubs that abound, with good bridge players to every neighborhood, with restaurants and tea rooms on every side, with luncheons and parties crowding on the heels of each other, surely there is more diversion ready at every woman's hand than is good for her.

She Can Go to Matinée
Just by Pinning on Her Hat

All of these amusements are equally open to her, married or single, and if a woman's husband won't take her to the theatre at night, all she's got to do is to pin on her hat and go to the matinee; if he won't take her to a restaurant to dinner and she yearns for the shaded lights, the gorgeously dressed women, the artificial palms and the music of cafe life, she can find a perfect substitute by going to tea at any of the smart hotels.

And if she's a sensible woman she does go, instead of fretting herself into a fiddle string because her husband won't take her out with him. It isn't a question now of a woman being "taken."

It's a question of her "going." Exactly the same thing may be said to the woman whose husband is stingy to her. The woman who is married to a man who refuses to give her the money she needs is foolish to waste her strength and energy in whining or trying to wheedle dollars out of him. She had far better face the fact that if she is to have any money to do with as she pleases she will have to earn it herself, and go to work.

And the sooner the better, because a woman must learn her trade and get established in it while she is young, if she succeeds. Any woman of ordinary intelligence and industry can earn a comfortable living with much less wear and tear on her nervous system than is involved in getting market money and clothes out of a peevish husband.

The trouble with women is that they so seldom have the courage to admit the truth to themselves about their marriages when they have made matrimonial mistakes. They keep on trying to drape the pink chiffons of romance about the skeletons in their closet, and hoping against hope that their husbands will somehow, some way, change.

Could Save Misery by Facing Mistakes
Squarely

So they go on clinging to their misery, like a man who hangs on to a losing business, until they go bankrupt in happiness, when all the time they might have saved themselves if they had only been brave enough to have looked their mistakes in the eye, and made the best of a bad bargain. And this consists not in weeping over it, but in appropriating for yourself whatever good the situation affords, and when you can't get your first choice, taking the next.

It is, of course, hard on a woman when she isn't privileged to sit down at the head of the feast of domestic bliss, but she can make a very tasty dish of the crumbs of happiness that fall from the table if she has the wit and the determination to do it.

Realism in Art
By MALCOLM DOUGLAS

MIKE ANGELO MCCANN

Was a famous painter-man; His works, agreed the critics were ideal; Just as humble on the ground as on the canvas till it actually smiled real.

He would paint a bobby doll With a stock of hay so well That the cattle to his easel close would stray; If Mike Angelo McCann From his picture frightened ran, They were always sure to lick from it the hay.

He would paint a spray of flowers So that in a few short hours A swarm of bees to all the petals hung, And Mike Angelo would beat An undignified retreat From his studio for fear of getting stung.

A still-life he would make Of a juicy, well-broiled steak, Sliced tomatoes, and of radishes a bunch, And his wife was not at all balked When with pepper and with salt She would serve it to the family for lunch.
